I am a flight attendant for ATA Airlines. I strongly encourage you to consider the repercussions regarding allowing cell phone use during flight on airplanes. That is a nightmare waiting to happen. It is difficult enough to get passengers to abide by the no-cell-phone-use rule now, and it would only make things more difficult for other passengers and not to mention the flight crew. Just a few examples of problems are: conducting a safety briefing would be next to impossible -- especially in an emergency, it opens the door for more "effective" terrorism, and not to mention the rudeness of everyday cell phone use we see on the streets and public transportation now! I believe it to be an undeniable mistake to allow cell phone use during flight. Please consider these obvious problems when deciding whether or not to allow cell phone use in the air. Thank you for your time.